ABOUT THE PROJECT

Ntiva, a national full-service IT company that has seen explosive growth in the last seven years, has expanded to three new office spaces. The expansion has meant the company needed to move to multiple suites; but finding adequate space was always a challenge. When the time finally came for the company to move into new corporate headquarters, Ntiva turned to its staff and customers as well as industry experts for ideas about how to design the space. The consensus was a modern, fun design with flexible work areas. And for seating, Wit fit the bill perfectly.

WHAT MADE THE DIFFERENCE?

Wit's look – its lean profile, fun color options and modern style – was exactly the feel that Ntiva wanted for in its new building. They were looking for design that could be modern, but also fun. But the company was surprised and pleased to find that Wit was also comfortable and affordable.

Washington Workplace's Sarah Gabriel and Kristen Ulrey were creative with the style and look of the room. They coordinated Wit's colors to create a unique, hip space for the growing company. The space had some modern design elements throughout, and Sarah and Kristen knew that Wit's contemporary look would fit right in.

The decision makers at Ntiva had already picked out interior colors and coordinated their choice of Wit to go with it. The ample space of the new facility means the company uses an open floor plan with areas where people can pull up seating for impromptu meeting. Wit's color selection gave the company the flexibility to use color schemes to organize meeting areas in the open floor plan.

WHAT'S NEXT

Now that the spacious new headquarters have been outfitted with SitOnIt Seating Wit chairs, a lot of employees are getting first-hand experience with the chair. And the reviews are great. The fresh look and bright colors help provide organization, comfort and style to an open plan for a company that's got an exciting future.
